

Local Government Facilities Earning the ENERGY STAR

As utility bills rise, these costs become an increasing percentage of a local government's budget. However, energy costs are manageable. These savings can be achieved through operation and maintenance, but also through new construction or renovation. Energy savings performance contracting (ESPC) is one financial mechanism that allows entities to pay for energy savings measures with existing budgets. Below is a listing of city and county facilities that have earned the ENERGY STAR for high performance and lower costs; the listing also recognizes the companies that helped them with this achievement.

City/County Government and Facility	Architectural Firm	Engineering Firm	Performance Contracting Firm	ENERGY STAR Score / Year
